Says She Took Child For Love, Not Ransom

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Deep love for three-year-old "Tootsie" Essington, and not a desire to obtain a ransom, was the excuse given by Clara Weiner, eighteen, when arraigned before Magistrate Deuel on a charge of kidnapping the little girl. On July 26 Miss Weiner took the child from the home of her mother, Mrs. Ada Essington, 186 Second avenue, and said she was going to a motion picture show. She did not return, and was arrested Friday.

"I love 'Tootsie' so much that I could not resist taking her and keeping her," said Miss Weiner. "I meant to return her to Mrs. Essington, and I did not know I was causing so much alarm."

Coroner Blames Death Upon Tardy Surgery

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—"That such a thing could happen in a civilized community is a disgrace," said Coroner F. J. Connelley, commenting on the death of a young man who died after a long illness. The patient, who was accidentally shot in the abdomen by a youthful friend, had been in the hospital for several days. The coroner alleges Goldstein's life might have been saved had he received prompt medical attention.

Missing Officer Accused.

Charges, alleging irregularities in financial transactions, against First Lieut. William L. Polindexter, retired, whose place of residence is given at 1113 G street northwest have been prepared by the adjutant general of the army for court martial. No date has been set for the court martial, because the War Department officials declare, Lieut. Polindexter's present whereabouts are not known.

What and Where to Eat by Prominent Restaurateurs

No. 5—The Variety of Dishes Afforded the Restaurant Diner

By C. D. Georgeou
Prop. Grand Palace Lunch

The average housewife cannot afford to have a large variety of dishes for any one meal. Were it possible to buy in sufficiently small quantities at no increase in price, she could.

A good, clean, modern restaurant places before its patrons a most varied menu, and it is possible to enjoy a large number of favorite dishes at a meal, for the diner pays only for what he consumes, whereas a meal consisting of a meat, three or four reasonable vegetables and a fruit or other dessert with coffee, etc., would be prohibitive in cost at home, it may be enjoyed at a restaurant at no greater cost than the average home dinner that does not permit of this variety.

Try dining out—this is the time of the year when you will find it especially delightful.
